Bridging biases to bond

Quarterly Newsletter of ASA

Volume 34 | Issue 1 | Jan-Mar 2025

Where waters meet

Hundreds of miles from the buzz of city life, Dev stepped into the cool, sacred waters of the Triveni Sangam. Not long ago, he had been deep in the corporate world - leading meetings, chasing quarterly targets, and navigating office politics. Yet despite the outward success, something was missing. So, he walked away. Not to escape, but to seek a new sense of purpose beyond job titles and performance metrics.

Nearby, Meera knelt by the river's edge, letting the water slip through her fingers as she whispered a silent prayer. She, too, carried her own burdens - grief, disappointment, and the quiet exhaustion that comes from trying to stay strong in front of others. Her journey to the Sangam wasn't about finding answers; it was about reclaiming peace.

Their paths crossed by chance, or perhaps by something more. A glance. A simple question. "First time here?" Dev asked gently. Meera nodded, a small smile breaking through. What followed wasn't profound or planned - it was two people talking, listening, and realizing that behind each face is a story. They spoke of setbacks and fears, of letting go and starting over. They came from different worlds, yet their experiences echoed similar notes.

In the shared silence of the river, something subtle shifted. The assumptions they carried about others - the polished executive, the quiet stranger - gave way to empathy. They were no longer just individuals with separate struggles, but fellow humans trying to navigate life with courage and grace. As they stepped out of the water, they weren't just lighter from the conversation - they were connected. Not by background or beliefs, but by vulnerability and respect.

In many ways, this is what bridging biases truly looks like. It doesn't require grand gestures, just a willingness to pause, to listen, and to see beyond the surface. In our workplaces, as in life, bonds are built not by sameness, but by shared humanity.

Because sometimes, when waters meet, so do we.

A WORD FROM OUR MANAGING PARTNER

2025 began on a great note as we slid into our 34th Birthday.

We welcomed in the Cyber Security team led by Shrikrishna and his able lieutenant, Rachit. The latter we get to know better over coffee inside.

The ever-increasing knowledge sessions we chaired or participated in shows the keen desire we have to share, and that was further highlighted by the winter donation efforts. Proud of this 'giving' attitude.

A swirl of festivities. Holi, Lohri, Pongal, Gudi Padwa. And we did not stop there – dinners and outings. Some of us share their travelogues herein. I was inspired by Amit from RAS, Mumbai. Well done! But then we had the 3 musketeer's plus 1 indulging in Coldplay. They truly had a party. The picture says it all.

Proud to see Mina representing us in the JCCII Women Empowerment Committee. Go girl. Spread the message of inclusiveness and safety for women.

It seems to be raining dogs and cats – at least in the pet corner. A bunch of smart dudes there. Some humans too.. maybe 😊.

Keep dancing Geetika or making people dance to your tunes. As for Sathya, her best kept secret is no more so. Connect connects all.

Off into the working months

Best regards

Ajay Sethi

HOLI ACROSS CITIES

Holi, the vibrant festival of colors, is celebrated with unique traditions and enthusiasm across different Indian cities. Here's a glimpse of how it's observed in various regions

Mathura and Vrindavan (U.P.)

Known as the birthplace of Lord Krishna, these towns celebrate Holi with immense fervor. The festivities start a week before the actual day, with the famous Lathmar Holi in Barsana, where women playfully hit men with sticks. The Phoolon wali Holi in Vrindavan is mesmerizing, with flowers replacing colors in the celebration.

Amritsar (Punjab)

Holi here is vibrant with Bhangra and Gidda performances, along with traditional sweets like 'Gujiya' and 'Thandai'. The festival also marks the beginning of the harvest season, making it a joyous celebration.

Mumbai (Maharashtra)

In Mumbai, Holi is celebrated with a mix of traditional and modern styles. People gather in large open spaces, using colored powders and water balloons. The famous 'Holi with Bollywood stars' event attracts huge crowds, blending music, dance, and vibrant colors.

Jaipur (Rajasthan)

Jaipur hosts the Mewar Holi, which is a royal affair. The city's palace becomes a center of celebration with traditional music, dance, and the elephant procession, where decorated elephants participate in the festivities.

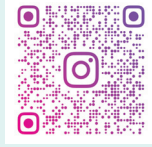

Delhi

In the capital city, Holi is celebrated both in traditional and modern ways. Communities organize events with DJ parties, color runs, and cultural programs. The 'Holi Milan' parties are popular in neighborhoods, where people come together for food, music, and colors.

A Night of Magic

January 19, 2025, will forever be etched in my memory - the night I lived my dream of watching Coldplay perform live in Mumbai. As a musician, their music has always been a guiding light for me and finally witnessing them in person was beyond surreal.

Getting the tickets itself felt like a miracle. With over 1.5 million fans in the queue, we were among the lucky ones to secure a spot. The anticipation was electric. The gates opened at 3 p.m., but we reached at 1:30, eager and restless. The scorching sun bore down on us - no water, no food, just pure excitement keeping us standing from 2 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Then, the moment arrived. The stadium erupted in deafening cheers as Chris Martin and the band stepped onto the stage. Instantly, every bit of exhaustion vanished. The energy surged through us like a wave. The sea of 80,000 fans became one, singing in unison, our voices blending with the magic of Coldplay's melodies. The synchronized light-up wristbands transformed the stadium into a galaxy of colours, pulsating in perfect harmony with the music.

Every song was a spectacle - fireworks exploding in the sky, confetti raining down, and Chris Martin's heartfelt connection with the crowd making us feel like we were part of something cosmic. "Fix You" had the entire stadium swaying with emotion, while "Viva La Vida" turned into a euphoric anthem.

We danced, we sang, and we lost ourselves in the music. Sharing this unforgettable night with Ashima, Lea, and Ancy made it even more special. The lights, the music and the voices of the thousands of strangers - unknown yet united by the rhythm. It's all still playing in my mind like a beautiful dream, a dream, a night etched in memory, forever.

Vishu festival in Kerala

One of the most beautiful experiences where I truly witnessed human connection was during the Vishu festival in Kerala. The festival, marking the Malayalam New Year, is a time of spiritual renewal and a celebration of community and shared hope.

On the morning of Vishu, families set up their Vishu Kani, an arrangement of coconuts, rice, flowers, fruits, and a mirror placed in front of a deity's idol (Sreekrishnavighraha). This ritual symbolizes prosperity and good fortune, and I remember watching my family gather to witness the Vishu Kani, their faces radiating peace and anticipation for the year ahead. It felt like the beginning of something sacred, a collective belief in new beginnings. What moved me most during this time wasn't just the rituals but the sense of togetherness that radiated through the community. Families exchanged blessings, gifts, and food, creating a spirit of unity. Elders give small amounts of money (Vishukaineettam) to younger members, symbolizing good fortune. This tradition transcended households and made me feel part of something bigger - carrying forward the hopes and blessings of those before me. The best part, though, is the meal. Sitting together on banana leaves, enjoying the Sadhya, there's warmth in the air. The laughter, passing dishes, and sharing stories make the experience unforgettable, as it's not just about the food but the connection. And the fireworks lighting up the sky brought a shared excitement and joy.

It wasn't just the colours but the sense of togetherness, uniting everyone, no matter where they were from. Vishu has always been a festival that strengthens my connection with my family and everyone else celebrating around the world. The joy, traditions, and memories made stay with me long after the day is over.

Whispers of Shyam: A Pilgrimage in Harmony

The rumble of the bus engine became a rhythmic pulse, blending seamlessly with the chorus of "Hare Krishna Hare Krishna." Our journey to Khatushyam Ji wasn't just travel - it was devotion in motion. Families, friends, and solo seekers came together, turning a simple bus ride into a spiritual odyssey.

From the moment we boarded, anticipation cracked in the air. The bus transformed into a mobile temple, where elderly women led bhajans with unwavering voices, children clapped with innocent enthusiasm, and men shared stories of Shyam Baba's miracles. At roadside dhabas, over hot chai and pakoras, laughter and faith intertwined, reinforcing the unity of our pilgrimage. The darshan was a symphony of chaos and devotion - long queues, jostling crowds, and the resounding chants of "Shyam Baba ki Jai." Yet, in that fleeting moment before him, everything stilled. His compassionate gaze filled the space with peace, making every hardship worthwhile.

The return journey was quieter, a serene contentment settling over us. We had come seeking blessings but left with something deeper, a shared experience that transcended individual prayers. This wasn't just about reaching a temple; it was about the connections formed along the way.

Faith, when shared, multiplies. In the heart of Rajasthan, amidst chants and devotion, we rediscovered the power of human connection - a pilgrimage not just of miles, but of souls.

A Celebration of Love

Amidst the hustle of work, we took a break to celebrate the wedding of our colleague Arti Sharma, a moment that brought us all together beyond the walls of the office. As we enjoyed the festivities - from the cheerful rituals to the lively dance floor - laughter and conversations flowed effortlessly. The usual workplace hierarchy faded, replaced by a shared sense of joy and camaraderie. It was a reminder that beyond deadlines and meetings, moments like these strengthen our bonds and stand as a testament to the deep connections that make our journey more meaningful.

The Magic of Music: A Journey at NSUT Fest

Last year, I had the privilege of attending the Netaji Subhas University of Technology (NSUT) Fest, where the incredible Sunidhi Chauhan graced the stage. The atmosphere was electric, filled with the buzz of excitement, laughter, and an undeniable sense of anticipation. But as the night unfolded, it became clear that this event was much more than just a musical performance - it was a celebration of human connection.

The moment Sunidhi took the stage, the crowd erupted in a chorus of cheers. Her voice, rich and powerful, resonated through the air, weaving an invisible thread that seemed to pull everyone closer together. There were no strangers at that moment - only souls united by the power of music. I found myself surrounded by people from all walks of life, yet there was a shared understanding between us, a silent acknowledgment that we were all experiencing something extraordinary together. As the melodies filled the space, it was as though the music spoke directly to our hearts. I met people from different backgrounds, all with their own stories, but in that shared experience, we connected in a way words couldn't capture. The music transcended language, culture, and distance, binding us in a shared rhythm of joy and emotion.

That night, I realized something profound: music isn't just a form of entertainment - it's a bridge. It connects not only hearts but also the very essence of what it means to be human. Music isn't just about notes or lyrics; it's about bringing souls together. And in that moment, I understood the power of music to make us feel truly alive, together.

The Spiritual and Cultural Experience at Udupi

Udupi, a coastal town in India, is not only blessed with breathtaking natural beauty but also steeped in rich cultural and spiritual traditions. Renowned for its iconic Lord Krishna temple, Udupi serves as a significant pilgrimage site. The unique way of worship practiced here, particularly the Bhoota Kola ritual, allows me to witness these traditions firsthand.

Bhoota Kola stands out due to its vibrant and immersive nature. It symbolizes the local people's devotion and their connection to ancestral spirits, encompassing not just a religious experience but a cultural spectacle that reflects the essence of the coastal community. The participating worshiper, chosen from a hereditary lineage, undergoes a meticulous preparation process before the ritual begins, showcasing a profound respect for the divine and the sacred art of performance. After completing the elaborate makeup and adornment, which involved covering the body with locally sourced materials like coconut leaves, the worshiper sought blessings from both the deity and the priest. This initial phase of worship included honoring important regional deities such as Marlaajumadi, Panjurli, and Jumadi Bhanta through a small Pooja. Each ritual act, even the simple adorning of anklets filled with bells, was accompanied by reverence; everything used in the performance was first worshiped. The worshiper, now possessed by the spirit of the deity, danced fervently, communicating joy and concerns on behalf of the community. The rhythm of the bells from the anklets echoed through the air, drawing in the crowd with an almost magnetic pull. This was not merely a performance.

Udupi illuminated the interplay between spirituality and culture, represented beautifully through the Bhoota Kola ritual. The meticulous preparation, the reverent worship, and the evocative performance collectively create an enchanting tapestry that speaks to the heart of the community.

Hardly five days in and this white fur ball with shark teeth has already claimed the house - and my attention - as his own. If something gets in his way, he chews it, no questions asked. Mischief dripping from his eyes as he sits on my book in this picture, waiting to shred it into pieces, and why not? It was interrupting his playtime. Target Locked - CHEW!

From getting scolded for causing chaos to sitting on the couch like he's the king of the house, we've seen it all...

The bond we shared was beyond words - she was more than a pet; she was my second daughter. Every evening, she would rush to me even before my daughter did, seeking love and care. My daughter, too, called her a sister and loved her dearly. But I lost her while trying to protect her from being taken by the GHMC team, as she was a stray. Despite all my efforts, I couldn't keep her due to residency restrictions (I am a non-local, and the local people knowingly didn't allow me to keep her). My wife, daughter, and I couldn't eat or sleep properly for days. She will always remain in my heart - not as a stray, but as my daughter.

Words fall short in describing what he means to me, the love I share with him is something I know I'll never experience again. To Max <3

Kedarkantha Snow Trek

Waking in the arms of lush white snow on the first day of 2025... It was a dream come true....

It was a very memorable and joyful moment of my life. I climbed an elevation of about 6,300 feet, beginning at 6,200 feet above sea level and reaching 12,500 feet. I was one of the 30 who managed to reach the summit of Kedarkantha in Uttarakhand, out of a group of 80, and that too well in time before the sunrise

My journey started from Mumbai to Delhi on December 29. I headed to Dehradun from Delhi and took the bus to Sankri base village. After a sound sleep, on the morning of December 31, I started the walk of my life to my dream destination, full of surprises and wonderful scenery. We reached our first halting point and spent the night in a tent surrounded by full, lush, white snow. At 12 a.m., everyone wished each other a Happy New Year amidst mild music and dancing around the tents. Waking up the first morning of the New Year at 9,100 feet above sea level was the perfect moment to cherish. In the morning we resumed our trek to reach the base camp; the actual trek to the summit begins here. On the way, we came across the frozen lake called "Juda ka Talab". After having fun sliding through snow and clicking numerous pictures, we moved forward to the 2nd stop at a height of 11,250 feet. With a few hours of sleep and a quick breakfast, we began our walk early to conquer the peak. After a continuous trek of 3 hours, finally the moment I had been waiting for the last few days arrived. It was around 06.15 when I reached the summit to capture a beautiful shot of the sunrise at a height of 12,500 feet above sea level.

After spending about 90 minutes at the peak, I began the descent and journey back home with loads of beautiful photos and wonderful memories to recall and cherish later in my life and to share with my friends & loved ones.

Mahakal Temple

In the fleeting days of February and March, my world felt like it was unraveling. As an introvert, I rarely let people in, but when someone special entered my life, it was as though the darkness lifted. I felt seen, understood and loved in a way I never thought possible. But just as quickly as they came, they vanished, leaving me with an aching emptiness and a burning question: Where do I go from here?

I knew I had to find myself again, to explore new horizons and rediscover my spark. So, I set off on a quest, not for someone else, but for my own soul. Ujjain called to me, with its sacred Mahakal Temple and rich history. I stood in awe before the divine, feeling the energy shift within me. Suddenly, I realized: the destination wasn't a place, it was the journey itself, the courage to step into the unknown, and the strength to shine even in solitude.

This was my adventure path not defined by others, but by the resilience and light I found in myself. And in that moment, I became the hero of my own story.

Rishikesh Bike Trip

It all began with a random call from a friend on a Friday night while I was still buried in work at the office. Out of nowhere, he said, "Pack your bag - we're heading to Rishikesh for a ride!" My first reaction was, "HOLD ON, KAHAN JA RHE HAIN HUM?!" But before I could protest any further, he hit me with, "Don't worry, I've already booked everything - just pack your bags!" And just like that, our adventure began.

By 11:00 p.m., we were on the road, setting off from Delhi towards Rishikesh under the starry night sky. Somewhere around 3:00 a.m., hunger struck, and we made a pit stop at a roadside dhaba. Nothing hits the spot like steaming parathas and a cup of hot comforting chai in the middle of the night. Re-fuelled and recharged, we hit the road again. When we finally arrived in Rishikesh, the first thing we did was check into our cozy campsite. But there was no time to rest - we were too excited to explore! Hopping onto our bikes, we ventured out to discover off-road trails that led us to hidden gems, including an enchanting, untouched waterfall that felt like stepping into a dream. The thrill of biking through uncharted paths and the serenity of the waterfall made it a moment to treasure. Back at the campsite, the adventure didn't stop. While indulging in other activities, my friends were pleasantly surprised to learn I could ride horses too! I couldn't resist showing off a bit, and it added a whole new layer to the fun. As night fell, we gathered around a bonfire, the warm glow lighting up our faces and the laughter echoing into the night. Between music, stories, and a carefree vibe, it was a party like no other. That night, we made memories that I'll cherish forever.

Trips like these with close friends are a reminder of how life's best moments often come from the most spontaneous plans. Everyone deserves to create memories like this - filled with adventure, laughter, and the kind of joy that stays with you forever.

When did you start your journey with ASA?

December 16, 2024

Whom do you consider your inspiration? Has this inspiration changed from your childhood to now?

I get a lot of inspiration from my father who made me learn general management practices. I also admire Sachin Tendulkar, the master of his league, for his consistency and his ability to stay away from any conspiracy.

What is 'success' in your dictionary?

Success for me is the state of mind. For me it is about living each day. For example, if I can come to the office with joy, it is a matter of success for me.

Rachit - from the eyes of his friends vs. from his family's perspective?

I don't have a big social circle, but the friends I have are long term friends, and I am candid with them. From my family's perspective, I am just a good man.

Your happiest memory?

When I learned to ride a bicycle. Bicycling resonated with freedom to me.

What advice would you offer to someone beginning their career?

As life is a long journey, there is no reason to become restless. You must be patient and visionary with your goals.

If you could go back and change one decision in your career, what would it be and why?

Honestly, no decisions went wrong for me. I consider it to be the kindness of almighty that even if something went wrong, a few years later those things made me realize that it was the right decision at that point in time.

How, according to you, will AI disrupt various professions?

Everyone's rushing to jump on the AI train out of FOMO. But here's a different take: AI won't disrupt everything. It has limitations. If we get our basics right, AI becomes a strong enabler, not a threat. It is not going to take jobs in the foreseeable future; rather, it can aid work.

Have there been any aspects of the workplace that you didn't like in the past, but now you make a conscious effort to avoid passing those same challenges on to your juniors?

Micromanagement is a form of management that I stay away from to ensure my teammates get adequate 'space' to work. I address my teammates as colleagues rather than subordinates.

If you could have any superpower, what would it be?

If I had a superpower, I would achieve my firm's revenue targets in a day!!

Have you reached where you wanted to, as a kid, or is the hustle still on?

The hustle to excel never ends. I was not sure where I wanted to reach when I was a kid. But I am happy with where I am. It has been a satisfying journey so far.

Can you recall a time when a shared goal or purpose brought together individuals from different backgrounds? It could be an experience like attending a concert, embarking on a trekking adventure, or participating in a religious or cultural event. How did that experience shape your perspective on unity and collaboration?

Sometime back, the entity we were investigating tried to shift blame, accusing us of inserting malicious code into their system. Within 48 hours, we assembled a 15-16 members cross-functional team - from fraud management, information security, and more. Working together, we quickly proved the allegation was false. It was a clear example of unity and how people's power can be tapped.

With quiet strength and genuine care,
She guides the team through every day,
From project meetings to dance floor flair,
Her warmth lights up work and play.
At home, two little ones keep life sweet,
While flavours rich make evenings bright,
A leader, mother, with non-veg delight—
She balances it all just right.

For the audit team she's the shining light,
With jokes that make everything feel right.
Funny and outgoing, she steals the show,
Her laughter and warmth make the workplace glow.

Loves her sweets, though sugar's a foe,
But her caring nature continues to grow.

Down to earth and always near,
Her kindness and reach bring endless cheer.
Every event or trip, she makes it the best,
With her presence, we're truly blessed!
